President's Letter

It looks like Dea Jae did a good job in my absence last month. This was the second time she has had charge of a first meeting in a new place. Thanks, Dea Jae, but let's not make it a thing.

The scrap buster challenge was inaugurated with a bang. Lots of little scrappy blocks being made and no doubt many, many more to come. (I must confess that I rushed right out to pad my stash just before the kickoff.) What makes it fun is its simplicity and the satisfaction of quick completion. It's not too late to join in if you are looking to tame your stash of scraps - you know those little devils in that basket are multiplying like rabbits. It will be interesting to see all the different results at year's end.

The guild owes a bushel of gratitude to two members who have carried responsibility for some time now and who have decided to move on to other things.

- - Linda Kirk has been the guiding force behind Storybooks and Quilts to Go for more years than a dog has fleas. She has organized the purchase, cataloging, storage and distribution of materials as only a well-trained nurse can do. She leaves her position a snap to fill. Interested?
- - Charlene Carroll has been carefully minding the Bees for us. It hasn't all been honey trying to keep times, places and contact details up to date but she has done a great job. The buzz will now continue with Elaine Staller holding the smoke can.

Enjoy the lovely Spring weather until we meet again. -- Mary

A WARM WELCOME TO OUR NEW MEMBERS!
Isabel Perez, Julie A. Niren, & Julie Isabel.

3.2020 Pieces of the Past, 119: Corduroy, by Ellen Hernandez

Fustian fabric, the precursor to corduroy, was developed in Al-Fustat, Egypt in 200 BC. Woven with a linen warp and a thick cotton woof, one side was cut to reveal a thick, low pile. As the cotton trade grew, fustian became popular throughout Europe. In the 16th Century fustian was made in England and Ireland. For a time, Catholic priests were required to wear fustian chasubles (outer vestments) rather than expensive fabrics. European nobility, especially King Henry VIII, was drawn to the warm, durable fabric sometimes woven with silk.

The 17th Century French phrase ‘corde du roi’ or ‘cloth of the king’ was originally thought to be the origin of the word corduroy but more likely it came from ‘cord’ for tufted and ‘duroy’ which was an English course woolen fabric. By the 18th Century the fabric was referred to as ‘cotton velvet’ and later ‘poor man’s velvet.’ In the 19th Century it was often called ‘Manchester’ for the British factory where it was made, and had acquired the ‘wales’ or ridges that we recognize today. Wales are measured in ridges per inch and range from 1.5 to 21. The finest quality has a higher wale, also called pinwale, and the standard size is 10-12. The production process includes a third yarn woven more loosely creating a pile tuft which is later cut to create the ridges or ribs. The ribs are often singed and brushed to create the soft texture. (To clarify: There are a variety of corduroy type pile fabrics. Velvet is made from silk, rayon, polyester, or a blend, has a longer pile than velveteen, and drapes easily. Velveteen is made from cotton and silk, has a tight pile, and is slightly rough and stiff. Velour is a knit and is denser.)

Corduroy has been used for a range of items, from school uniforms and WWI military uniforms to Ford Model T upholstery. WWII Land Girls of the Women’s Land Army were issued corduroy pants in jodhpur style. The appeal of the fabric has waxed and waned. In the 1960s corduroy was popularized once again by the Beatles and Jerry Garcia and the Grateful Dead, and even a popular children’s book, Corduroy, by Don Freeman. Corduroy garments were worn by stars of all ages and for a variety of occasions. The versatile fabric was easy to launder, soft and warm, affordable, and could be dressed up or down. In the 1980s Versace introduced a popular line of men’s corduroy clothing. In the 1990s the new corduroy was stretchable and some versions had no wales making it appear as velvet.

A group of like-minded corduroy fans started the Corduroy Appreciation Club in 2005. Their main activities occur on November 11, or 11/11, a pattern that most resembles the fabric’s parallel nap.

Corduroy fashions have been on the upswing again since 2018 especially as pants and jackets for men and women, and dresses and skirts for women. Zachary Levi recently wore a corduroy suit at the 2019 ESPYs. New trends include making corduroy with bamboo.

If you are unable to attend the March meeting, please contact Cyndi Wheeler at (210) 410-2775; cyndiquilts@gmail.com and we will work something out. We are preparing these blocks for the May Work Day. We hope you join us in May...stop by the QPC table to sign up!

The goal of QPC is to offer guild members something new to try, something to sharpen your piecing or applique skills, as well as give you an opportunity to help the guild. The blocks you complete and turn in become Auction quilts to support the GSAQG. We invite you to participate in this worthwhile project.

The current blocks we are offering are:

Holiday Stars

Layers of Fun

Snowball 4-Patch

San Antonio Sue

- The Holiday Stars block offers an opportunity to match points with using a folding technique to add dimension to the block. Looking for a new technique with a bit of challenge...this block is for you!
- The Layers of Fun block goes together easily. This pieced block complements an alternative block to make an awesome quilt. It is like its title...fun to make.
- The Snowball 4-Patch has colorful, fun prints. It is a sew-cut-sway-sew again block. Has easy to follow instructions.
- San Antonio Sue block is an applique challenge. You are provided a blank canvas and can use any applique technique you prefer. We have stabilizer and precut "Sues" at the QPC table if you are interested. We do ask you not add any hard material such as buttons or metal trim to allow for longarm quilting. Due to a later rollout than planned the April deadline will be extended.

If you have any questions, or need assistance on any of these blocks, please stop by the QPC table at the guild meeting. We would love to help you! Happy Stitching!!! ☺

If you have any questions please feel free to contact Trixie Shell at 210-414-4872.

Looking Forward to: Quilt Show 2021

2021 Theme: "Quilts Around The Block." Think of house quilts, medallion quilts, quilts with community, quilts made by your neighborhood bees, and more.

2021 is also going to celebrate our guild's 40th year! Yes. 40 Years. The Ruby Anniversary. Look for a special project to commemorate our group coming soon.

We do not currently have a firm location or date for the show, just know that it is 2 years away. We do have a few committees in place for planning, and I'd love your help. The show is an incredible fundraiser, and it really does take a small army of quilters to organize it. Please, please, please consider helping out. Vacancies need chair-people and existing committees could always use extra help. Email me at jen.eskridge@gmail.com
